Theoretical Orientation: My theoretical orientation is integrative, and draws from various approaches, depending on context, goals and the best approach toward healing, growth and solutions. I believe the client brings a wealth of important experience and a life story that is continually unfolding. I believe strengths-based, rational-emotive, insight-oriented and solution-focused approaches are helpful ways to pursue self-discovery, self-understanding, improve life satisfaction and achieve important life changes. My therapeutic foundation comes from Cognitive-Behavioral and Interpersonal and Systems approaches, and I integrate Dialectical-Behavioral, Solution-Focused, Mindfulness-Based Cognitive, Emotionally Focused and Experiential therapies as appropriate.
